Special Lectures happening this week!

The Florida State University’s
College of Social Sciences and Public Policy
Cordially invites you to a lecture by:

Lee Rainie
Director of the Pew Research Center’s Project on the Internet & American Life
“Networked News”
February 7, 2013
3:30-5:00 PM
Broad Lecture Hall, Claude Pepper Center
636 West Call Street
FSU Campus
Sponsored by the Laird B. Anderson and Florence H. Ashby
Lectureship on Public Policy Journalism

The Pew Project has issued more than 350 reports based on its surveys that examine people's online activities and the internet's role in their lives. Lee’s latest book (co-authored with Barry Wellman) is Networked: The New Social Operating System (2012). In it he examines the social impact of digital technology. Lee also is co-author of a series of books about the future of the internet, including Up for Grabs; Hopes and Fears; Ubiquity, Mobility, & Security; and Challenges and Opportunities. Prior to launching the Pew Internet Project, Lee was managing editor of U.S. News & World Report. He is a graduate of Harvard University and earned a Masters degree in political science from Long Island University. For more information contact jmayo@fsu.edu

Successful Longevity Lecture Series, sponsored by the Provost's office.

Friday, Feb. 8 with a visit by Dr. Michael Marsiske from University of Florida who will be talking at 1:30 pm in the COM Auditorium (reception following) on:

ACTIVE and beyond: The evolving landscape of cognitive intervention for older adults

Since 1997, Michael Marsiske and others have directed the NIA-funded ACTIVE study, a long-term investigation of cognitive training for older adults. This talk will summarize the ACTIVE study and some key findings, before considering the larger and evolving context of cognitive interventions for older adults. By the end of this talk, participants should: (1) Understand the context of cognitive intervention research that led to the NIA-funded ACTIVE clinical trial; (2) Understand the major findings from the ACTIVE study, including initial training effects, transfer (or lack of transfer) to measures of everyday functioning, control, and well being, and subgroup variations in training effects; (3) Locate the ACTIVE study within the evolving landscape of cognitive intervention research for older adults; and (4) Learn about some recent follow-up research from the Marsiske lab, and others, regarding cognitive interventions for older adults.
